Murders and Executions.

In an editorial in the April Century, entitled "Mob or Magistrate," the following comparison is made between murder and the application of justice: "Over against the 1,500 murders of the last year, we have the report of barely 93 legal executions. Many of these must have been cases in which the crime has been committed during 1882, while many of the criminals of 1883 had not yet been brought to trial. It is not, however, far from the truth to say that, while thirteen or fourteen hundred murders are committed in this country every year, fewer than a hundred of the murders suffer the extreme penalty of the law. When the willful slayer knows that he has thirteen chances out of fourteen of escaping the full penalty of the law, the deterrent influence of punishment can not be said to be very powerful."

"The small number of murderers hanged by the sheriff and the greater number hanged by the mob, should be evidence enough that the administration of our criminal courts in many quarters is fatally defective and needs reforming. The only classes of persons interested in maintaining the present state of things are the criminals and the criminal lawyers; and it is not for their exclusive benefit that society is organized. The contrast between the swift, firm and sure methods of English and Continental courts in dealing with great criminals and the tardy, feeble and abortive methods of our own, should stir our national pride to some energetic measures of reform. The people must rouse themselves to demand a more vigorous enforcement of the laws and they must see to it that judges and prosecuting attorneys are chosen who have the ability and the will to bring evil-doers to justice. The judges on the bench may well inquire whether the protection of the criminal has not assumed disproportionate importance in our criminal procedure. If, in our fear lest an innocent man should suffer, the law itself, which is the only protection of innocent men, becomes utterly paralyzed, then there is a call for a revision of our methods and our maxims and the infusion of a new spirit into our laws. Every judge who will brush aside the hair-splitting devices of the lawyers and insist that criminal trials shall be conducted with vigor and directness of purpose, will deserve and be likely to win the approval of his fellow citizens."

The Editor and the Burglar.

Once upon a time a village editor awoke to find a burglar searching in his chamber for his gold and bonds and drawing his trusty pistol from beneath his pillow, he took steady aim at the nocturnal intruder's head. Looking around and becoming painfully aware of his danger, the burglar pleadingly said:

"Spare me, for I have made a mistake in the house. I have found nothing but an old out-of-date railroad pass. Let me depart in peace."

"Not so," answered the editor, holding his aim like a skilled marksman, "for this is mighty dull work for locals."

"But pause a moment and reflect," returned the burglar, "your paper is not issued till Friday. Your hated rival, the Weekly Bungster, will go to press to-morrow evening and would have at least two columns of my death and the coroner's inquest. It would be fully two days ahead of you."

"True enough," said the editor, with a sigh, as he lowered his pistol and replaced it under his pillow, "you are too early in the week for an item for me, and I, therefore, spare you. You will find the plumber's house, for which you evidently mistook this humble home, next door but one."—[Middletown Transcript.]

One of the luxuries which Mexico has in store for our epicures, when that country is thrown open to unrestricted intercourse, is the honey ant, a wonderful insect, of which specimens have lately been brought to New York. This family of ants are honey-gatherers and select certain ones to act as bottle or store-houses for their honey. The ants chosen for that purpose are perfectly round, as large as two peas and of beautiful amber hue. The Mexicans consider them as great delicacies and bring them on the table alive and kicking. A rich Mexican in New York imported a lot of them a few years ago to be eaten at a swell banquet which he gave to his friends.

A three days' festival began on the 10th inst. in Pompeii to commemorate the ancient glories of that luxurious city, the fashionable resort of wealthy Roman voluptuaries, who indulged there to the full in revelry and dissipation, until old Vesuvius had his sense of decency so shocked that he drowned the whole concern in a river of lava. The festival comprises the coronation of an Emperor, chariot races and an inspection of the evacuation, all of which are conducted with strict regard to costumes at prodigal cost.—[Louisville Post.]

Proposed Excursion to Texas and Mexico—A Large Programme.

FRANKFORT, KY., MAY 12, 1884.—Hon. M. T. Carpenter, Editor Sentinel, Shelbyville, Ky.—My Dear Sir. Not long since I saw in your paper a suggestion that I should take the Press Association to Texas or Mexico. I have been considering the proposition, and wanted to talk to you while you were here attending the late convention, but I only saw you on the platform, and other more important matters were engrossing us both. I write therefore to ask how something like this would do. Rendezvous in Louisville; thence to St. Louis and by Iron Mountain railroad to Texas, and by Texas Pacific to Abilene; two days at Abilene for rest and entertainment by the citizens, and seeing the adjacent country, including an antelope hunt; from Abilene to El Paso, thence returning by Southern Pacific, via San Antonio, Austin and Galveston, to St. Louis by the M. K. and T. road through the Indian Territory. This trip, giving time to see the principal cities, could be made in two weeks or sixteen days. It could be varied as follows: Instead of turning back from El Paso we could go on the City of Mexico, 1,200 miles, to which the railroad is now complete. Returning, instead of coming back from Galveston, we could proceed by rail to New Orleans and thence by Louisville and Nashville railroad back home.

I am prepared to say that I can carry out the programme of the first route, and believe I could execute the whole if desired. I propose to furnish a Pullman place car and a hotel car, the members of the excursion to be at no expense of transportation; the only cost will be board and hire of cook, porter and servants. The whole will not exceed $2.50 or $3 per day for each member. If we go to Mexico the time should be November, immediately after the Presidential election, which would enable us to take in the New Orleans exposition returning. If the boys want to go only to El Paso, I can take them before the National Convention. I would like about forty, but would take more provided they were bona fide newspapermen, and not extemporized correspondents, whose presence in such swarms at Bowring Green and Nashville broke up our pleasant annual meetings. Find out what the press thinks of my proposition, which may sound large, but is made in absolute earnest, and if responded to in proper spirit, will be carried out to the letter.

Yours truly,
J. STODDARD JOHNSON.

KILLED AT LAST.—Jeremiah Campbell who was instantly killed by a locomotive at Decatur yesterday, enlisted and served during the war as a private and First Lieutenant in Company B Thirty-second Illinois Regiment. He was shot through the head at Lookout Mountain, and laid five days on the field of battle for dead. Later he was shot through his body. After the war he served as United States detective, and finally served in the regular army as sergeant with Custer, when Major Reno lost seven companies and Campbell dug a trench with his pocket-knife behind a log to protect a wounded comrade and himself. While carrying the wounded soldiers, the latter was shot dead, and Campbell and his friends were wounded—[Chicago Inter Ocean.]

The boundless possibilities of life in this great and glorious republic are strikingly illustrated in the many phrases of Gen. Grant's career. A few decades back he was hauling cord-wood into St. Louis, and occasionally had himself to be hauled back to his humble country home. Since then he has commanded a million men in the field; been the civil ruler of 50,000,000 people, at an annual salary of $50,000; received presents running all the way from two for a-quarter bull-pups up to $250,000; been fed and feasted clear around the earth, and finally goes down in a magnificent ruin valued at $10,000,000!—[Times.]

Ashville is the town and place where they say pegged shoes were first invented, and it came about because the town shoemaker didn't have room enough to pull the waxed ends out to their full length without hitting his elbows against a mountain on one side or the other, and so he invented pegs that he could strike up and down perpendicularly and have plenty of room.—[Bill Arp.]

A certain lady having lost her husband, one of her friends called to pay a visit of condolence, and found the widow playing on the harp. The surprised visitor observed: "Why, I expected to find you plunged in grief. "Ah," said the other, in a tone of deep feeling, "you should have seen me yesterday."

Placed end to end the Presidential candidates would stretch across the continent.—[Philadelphia Record.]

'PRAISE THE LORD'

102 SHACKLEWELL LANE,
DALSTON, LONDON, E APR. 1884.

Dear Interior:

WEDNESDAY, April 21.—Another soft "May day." We are all very lazy, accordingly, Vernon came in for an early dinner and we had him all the rest of the day.

Another conference in loving comparison of thoughts on the scriptural distinction between "spirit, soul and body," out of which I am sure the dear LORD will give us something gloriously good; but it is too deep for us both, yet. Vernon thinks the "Spirit" the uncontaminated part of our wondrous organism and "Soul" the battlefield where flesh and spirit contend for the mastery. He has only thought at it yet and not thought it out, if indeed he or any one can. He goes to work to-morrow, teaching for a fortnight, and we shall see little of him before his return to Oxford. A blessed meeting at Barking Road tonight. Dr. and Mrs. Bury both down—the doctor tearing himself away from practice to get a fresh mouthful of what grows in the dear LORD'S green pastures. Had some difficulty in stowing away when the break started for the station. "Room for one more"—not even the conductor had the coxey to say and the traditional capacity of the modern bus, for once, failed outright.

THURSDAY, April 23.—We had rather a sad gathering of our dear working women in Aldersgate street at noon. A great fire last night in contiguous Pater Noster Row had thrown out of employment many engaged in the binding departments of the great publishing houses burned out. Sister Fisher seemed quite cast down, through her intense sympathy in their troubles. We dined at the Arcadian with John, and then went to Bro. Hone's to tea. He is one of dear Lambourne's deacons. At his hospitable board we met Mr. Richard Cory, of Cardiff, Wales, who went to the Tabernacle with us. This gentleman is a very worthy coal mine proprietor and a friend of every good work. He gives largely to many charities and his "praise is in all the churches." Bro. Lambourne has wrought unceasingly to get us to Cardiff, since he fell in love with our gospel; and as Mr. Cory is a good friend of his, he never rested until he got him to come and hear for himself. I think the good man was pleased tonight, though it is a wonder he was, considering I nearly always behave badly "on trial." And generally a rich man before me, known to be such, has all the effect of a red rag flaunted in a bull's face. I am almost sure to disgust him. But to-night I preached in my usual way and forgot that a millionaire sat on the platform. Praise the LORD for the victory over self, surely it is such. I have no right to be rude to a rich man more than to a poor one. The sermon led to a hearty invitation to Cardiff to preach and sing. And to his house, as of our house, while doing the work. The 2d Sunday in May was mentioned as the best time. And yet the devil brought us to the very verge of an upset again and again, for I am sure he wants to head us off from a Welsh gospel tour. The LORD gave me a plain, bold, yet needlessly offensive sermon on Luke xv, which, while it somewhat startled the good man, did not prevent him from responding with many "Amen's" during the delivery. He proposed to Marie to sing "Take me as I am," at the close of the sermon, mentioning it as a special favorite. Here was a muddle, as we never sing this popular favorite on account of its defective gospel. But the dear LORD gave me a word during the sermon, which would have made the singing of it so incongruous that I think he saw it plainly and was much relieved when I gave out instead, to the same tune, "O Lamb of God, I come." And so the devil's malicious plan to set us at variance was thwarted and good came out of it. Praise the LORD! Then he proposed that we should have an "inquirers' meeting" after service. Here was another quandary. But again the dear LORD gave me a word in the sermon about the needlessness of any inquiry, since only "yes" or "no" could answer the question involved in the gospel, so that I think he was again relieved, not to press the point of "after meeting." And thus we got over the dangerous shoals, by the dear LORD'S sweet grace. If Satan does not hinder, by some subsequent trick, we shall get to Wales yet.

FRIDAY, April 4th.—We went soon after dinner to Poplar, where Bro. Gillespie met us and escorted us over the Albert docks. These are formed by excavations, deep and wide, for three miles along the river, with entrance and exit at either end. The sailing vessels frequent the East India and other docks, while the great ocean steamers for the most part find moorings here. We saw some monsters of 5,000 or 6,000 tons burden, loading and discharging cargo. These ply principally to India and Australia. Hundreds of lascars in fluttering Oriental garb were working on every hand. The poor Hindooostanes looked miserable enough, for the wind was raw and cutting and their baggy trowsers and cotton shirts poorly protected them from cold. I addressed several in their mother tongue, which seemed to delight them greatly. They are Bombay Mussulmans principally. After a long and interesting stroll over the docks, we returned to Barking Road and took tea at the chapel with Mrs. Gillespie and Bros. Lambourne and Towner, added to our party. The latter may be remembered as pastor of Carpenter Road chapel, where we had such a glorious meeting last June. He gives good accounts of the permanency of the work and the faith and zeal of the converts of that meeting, who joined his church. A precious meeting at night with undiminished power in service. We promised Bro. Towner to give him another week, if we could, to "supply the lack of service" occasioned by our sudden departure for Scotland last summer. Ever in Jesus, GEO. O. BARNES.

LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

LITTLE LIVER

Stanford, Ky., May 20, 1884

W. P. WALTON.

"MAD, Mad, forgive me dear wife, and love to the boy." These bitter words of despair were the last written by Judge Richard Reid before blowing out his own brains with a pistol shot, and they tell a tale of agonizing woe that stirs to pity every true heart that reads them. Attacked for a fancied wrong by a cowardly brute in his own office, to which he had gone by apparently friendly invitation and dazed and stunned by blows with a cane from the back, Judge Reid submitted without resistance to the lowest indignity that can be put upon a man—a cowhiding. Unlike some officers that we have known, he was not breaking the laws that he had sworn to defend by carrying a pistol and not being able, perhaps, to resist at the time of infliction the disgrace that had been heaped up on him he carried into practice his religious and judicial obligations by refraining from going and shooting down in his tracks the dirty whelp that so richly deserved a dog's death. This moral courage and Christian forbearance is not popular in Kentucky, where even little children are taught to be the avengers of their own wrongs and a large majority of those who read of the affair misinterpreted the action of Judge Reid and stamped him as a coward unworthy of the name of man. True there were some friends who stood by and congratulated him on so noble and law-abiding stand, but these were not sufficient in number to uphold him in his decision of right and wrong by frequent taunts, either expressed or implied, his once bright mind lost its balance and in a moment of desperation he took his own life, which had become a burden to him. Occupying nearly the highest honor that can be bestowed on a member of his profession, with bright prospects of stepping in a few months to the very highest; with a lovely home, affectionate wife and promising boy and yet reached the meridian of a life that seemed destined to be one of the few that was not born to die, the tragedy and its ruling cause are unparalleled in sadness. But what of him who has brought all this sorrow and disgrace upon a once happy family and spit upon the judicial dignity of the State? Like the contemptible, vile cur that he is he blanches with fright at the result of his own work and feeling that "murderer" is stamped on his miserable countenance, he flees in hot haste as soon as the terrible news reaches him and in a distant State stays for a time the vengeance that ought to be visited upon him. Ordinarily we are outspoken in opposition to anything that smacks even of a mob spirit. But if there ever was a case which demanded the prompt action of Judge Lynch the present is that one and we shall long to chronicle that John Jay Cornelson has attained, as much as his worthless life can for his crime, at the end of a rope swung from a convenient limb. We are a law-loving and law-abiding man, but when a person puts himself outside of the law and it can reach his case only in a small fine for assault, then we advocate as the next best thing to the courts, Judge Lynch's prompt and effective remedies. Cornelson has forfeited his neck. Let him pay the penalty.

The Louisville Times, which by the way is flourishing like a green bay tree, and therefore feels in a good humor, tries to Polk fun at us as follows: "Brother Walton, of the Stanford INTERIOR JOURNAL, say unkind things about the late Legislature. Two years from now the people of Lincoln county will send the young man to Frankfort to represent them and he will then probably undergo a change of heart on the subject of General Assemblies. Newspaper men almost invariably make good legislators and Walton would be sure to do so." Like the Pharisee, we are glad that we are not as other men in one particular at least. We crave no political honors and would not accept the best office in the gift of the good people of Lincoln, even if it were tendered unanimously. All we ask is a paid-up subscription from every man of them, if they think we can give them value received and we will continue to tell them right along exactly the truth about the Legislature, or any other man that is worth the trouble.

The stock gamblers' panic did not effect the country at large very perceptibly. Wall street was shaken up to the extent of many millions, but the excitement has subsided and if the result will teach a lesson, the experience will not even at that be very dearly bought. How the swindling firm of Grant & Ward, whose liabilities are stated at fifteen millions, could have victimized so many people, shows that the fool-killer has too long delayed his tour of thining out the ranks of those whose duty it is to slay.

The Virginia democrats in convention assembled deplored the higgling now going on over the tariff question and while they did not instruct the manifestations at the mention of the old ticket showed decided their feeling on the subject. The delegates were selected without regard to their tariff views, and are John S. Barbour, John T. Harris, R. T. Beirne and Page McCarty. The two latter are better known for their adherence to the code duello, each having downed his man on the field of honor.

EMMETT LOGAN is in luck. He is not only part proprietor of a new paper and a brand new heir, but his father-in-law has presented him with a beautiful brown stone front residence in Louisville. Every one of his host of newspaper and other friends will learn of his good fortune with joy and will with one voice exclaim. A good man is getting his deserts.

On our front page President Johnston, of the Kentucky Press Association, suggests an excursion, which will be approved by every editor in the State, whether he has time to go or not. It is much better than taxing any particular town with our entertainment, besides the insight into another section would be of great benefit to those who never saw beyond the boundaries of their own State.

THIEVES and other offenders still get their deserts by a public whipping on their bare backs in Delaware, as they should in Kentucky and elsewhere. Five of such cattle got 39 lashes well laid on at Newcastle Saturday and it is safe to say that the dose will never have to be repeated. The whipping post is a great reformer of morals.

The Mercer County Citizen, W. K. Cardwell, proprietor, Nat Gaither, editor and Samuel Davies local editor, is out and a copy is before us. Its appearance is most creditable and with Col. Gaither to furnish the mental pabulum, it is bound to be appreciated by everybody who enjoys spice happily commingled with facts.

It is said that the grand jury of New York will investigate the operations of Grant & Co. in Wall street and call them to account for their stupendous swindles. Gen. Grant has been for years a stock gambler and but for his name his sons would never have succeeded so well in duping the people.

The colored Methodists in general conference declared against camp meetings as being more productive of fun and frolic than of religious tendencies. The craniums of our colored brethren are sometimes very level, even if the cranial substance on them is disposed to be kinky.

FRIDAY was an unusually good day for the hangman, for in addition to the legal working off two murderers, in Ohio, three in South Carolina and two at other points, Judge Lynch's man got away with three in Arkansas. Let the good work proceed.

The Louisville Commercial nominates for Court of Appeals in the Mt. Sterling district, Judge Lynch, of Anywhere. We second the nomination and move that the gentleman be elected by acclamation.

Some three months ago the Virginia Legislature formally preferred a request to Senator Mahone and Kiddleberger to resign. The request was communicated to the President of the Senate, Edmunds, to be duly presented by him to the Senate, but he has failed up to the present time, to notice the communication. Representative S. S. Cox says: "I am almost forced to the belief that despite the assertions to the contrary Mr. Tilden will yield to the demand from all parts of the country and accept the nomination."

The fair in aid of the Home for Disabled Confederate Soldiers, at Richmond, Va., is a great success, thousands attending nightly and receipts up to Friday night amounted to nearly $4,000, or more than $100 a night.

The Kentucky Legislature has adjourned without enacting a law against men making darned fools of themselves. This being the case, John Logan has permission to continue being a candidate for the presidency.—[Louisville Times.]

A water-spout washed away the track on the Missouri Pacific and Union Pacific roads, south and west of Leavenworth, Kansas, Saturday. On the former road 150 feet was washed away, and seven cars loaded with cattle and the engine and tender went into the river, being completely wrecked. Seventy cattle were killed. The track was covered in places and in other places the water was from two to five feet deep.

A New York special summarizes the recent financial disasters in that city in this way: The list of crooked transactions are not yet made up, but it is probable that Grant & Ward wrongfully converted $4,000,000 of other people's money, Mr. Eno $2,500,000, Fisk & Hatch and A. W. Dimock & Co., succeeded in ruining a savings bank and compromising a telegraph company. Mr. Seney lost the Presidency of his bank, and turned his real estate over.

THE DREAD ALARM OF FIRE WAS AGAIN SOUND HERE SATURDAY AFTERNOON. CAPT. THOMAS RICHARDS' Handsome Little Residence on the Somerset Pike, half a mile from Main Street, which had caught either from the flue or a spark on the roof, was soon a smouldering mass. A large crowd gathered to save the house if possible, but owing to the insufficiency of water and the headway of the flames, the attempt was abandoned and all hands turned to removing the furniture. A greater portion of it was saved, but of course in bad condition. The kitchen furniture was an entire loss, together with a large assortment of canned goods, preserves and other eatables. The loss is fully $2,000, without a cent of insurance. For several years Capt. Richards has been unfortunate financially and this little home was all that was left of a once comfortable surroundings. The loss therefore is in the nature of a calamity to him and his friends, of whom no man has more, knowing his condition, responded liberally to his aid and a purse of some $700 was soon raised, which will be largely increased as soon as his loss is generally known.
